India's Golden Triangle with Intrepid

Chaotic is often a word used to describe India. People have visions of hordes of people and traffic coming from all directions, and frankly, they're not wrong. With over a billion people living in one country, and roughly 25 million people living in Delhi (or, to put it another way, the entire population of Australia), it's easy to see how chaos and crowds can ensue. Yet, somehow, after a couple days, I started to feel a sense of serenity in the midst of the madness.

My friend Lauren and I recently visited India for the first time, joining an eight-day tour of India's Golden Triangle with Intrepid. For Lauren, this was not only a first visit to India (and, indeed, Asia), but a first touring experience. She'd said that before her trip with Intrepid, she'd associated touring with a coach-load of people standing outside monuments. But we both discovered it was so much more with Intrepid.

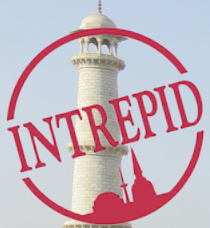

On just eight days with Intrepid, we dived into India, marvelling at stunning Mughal art and architecture - including the iconic Taj Mahal, and a city palace in a tiny town way off the tourist track (our group were the only visitors) - savouring the different dhals, spices, curries, snacks, street food, and sweet masala chais, we rolled chapatis with local women in the Gurudwara Sis Ganj Sahib in Old Delhi, waved at excited children in rural villages from a hot air balloon as the sun rose over the Jaipur area, watched a Bollywood film in a historic cinema with locals, tried on saris and browsed through local bazaars, and frankly had the time of our lives.

When we first met our group - just ten other travellers, mostly female, many of whom were travelling solo, hailing from the UK, Australia and the US, and with ages ranging from mid-twenties to 70 - the Taj Mahal had been referenced as one of the top attractions for taking the trip, but by the end, I felt that while we came for the Taj, we fell in love with (and would return for) the intoxicating enchantment of India! For me (and Lauren), perhaps the highlight of our trip was our Intrepid tour leader, Kush, who originates from Rajasthan, and was so helpful and insightful throughout, giving us unique perspectives on Indian traditions and history. With such a small group size, it felt very personalised, and Kush was able to organise a couple of optional activities tailored to our interests during free time - for example, Lauren and I got to visit the Mantar Jantar Observatory in Jaipur, with even our own local guide and rickshaw rides to/from organised by Kush, while everyone else chose to visit a local bazaar.

While 'Intrepid' as an adjective means 'fearless' - and as a tour company, that may give rise to images of travellers doing bungee jumping - for me, Intrepid helps guests feel fearless and confident while travelling, organising trips so that rough edges are smoothed out as much as possible, but without any patronising 'hand-holding'. Instead, you can enjoy the adventure of your life, immersing yourself into all the local secrets and culture of the destination you're discovering!

Since 1989, Intrepid have been combining responsible travel, small groups and big adventures. Their small group tours enable you to culturally immerse yourself and have an unforgettable travel experience.

Select Travel Holidays' in-house traveller (and marketing executive) Amy has recently experienced Intrepid (see p.3!) and says: 'Travelling to India with Intrepid was the perfect introduction to this unique country. We saw the big name attractions and classic landmarks that you'd expect, but also went off the beaten track to witness Real India in a charming town in Rajasthan. Our tour leader, Kush, was a fountain of local knowledge, and really made the trip for us! Plus travelling in a small group meant you got to connect well with each other, and immerse yourself authentically in the destination, keeping the integrity of the local atmosphere!'

Holiday Highlights...

MIAMI - Sunshine, sand, sea, a vibrant nightlife, and sultry Latin American flavour make Miami a unique and popular holiday destination. Visit the Spanish Monastery, said to be the oldest building in the Western Hemisphere; hit the shops along the famous Lincoln Road Mall promenade; explore the exotic Vizcaya Villa in the heart of Miami or perhaps visit the Biscayne National Park.

PRINCESS CAYS, BAHAMAS - Join us at this exclusive port of call, where you'll enjoy a private beach party on the island of Eleuthera in the Bahamas. One hundred miles long and only two miles wide, Eleuthera offers unspoiled beaches. Take in the views from the observation tower. Enjoy a complimentary beach barbecue. Sip a cool drink or browse the shops and the local craft market.

ST LUCIA - only 27 miles long and 14 miles wide and shaped a bit like an avocado. The volcanic island's main landmarks are the Pitons, two soaring peaks on its southern coast that rise up from the sea and shelter a magnificently dense rain forest. Visitors make the most of the island's natural beauty and secluded golden beaches, where coral reefs beckon snorkellers and scuba divers.
