HEALTHY RETURN TO SAILING

Introducing our Healthy Sail Panel

Silversea has enlisted a team of cross-disciplinary experts to guide our way forward in response to COVID-19. Comprised of globally recognised specialists in public health, infectious diseases, hospitality and maritime operations, the Healthy Sail Panel will advise us on a science-backed plan for a healthy return to cruising that ensures the wellbeing of our guests and crew as well as the communities we visit. In convening the expert panel, we sought a diverse group of leading experts with directly relevant experience in the challenges the industry faces.

The Healthy Sail Panel will attempt to provide a robust and comprehensive set of protocols to cover many different possible scenarios and minimise risk. Our intent is to adopt the panel's recommendations as well as U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) standards across our fleet.

The health and safety of our guests and crew will always remain our top priority – and we're confident our Healthy Sail Panel will lead us in the right direction when it comes to returning you to sailing with Silversea, as safely and as soon as possible.

10 MUST-SEE SPECIES WHEN BIRDWATCHING IN THE GALAPAGOS

By Ali Wunderman

The hardest part about birdwatching in the Galápagos Islands is convincing yourself that the wondrous creatures you’re seeing are actually real. I, for one, was amazed by my first sighting of a Blue-footed Booby because, unlike the birds back home, it didn’t flee. “For any birdwatcher, it is a dream to be able to observe a bird without being afraid it will fly away,” says Galápagos native Aura Banda, who works as a Silversea Expeditions naturalist guide. “But that’s the Galápagos!” she states.

Between seabirds that can’t get wet and finches that inspired Charles Darwin’s theory of natural selection, the Galápagos Islands are rich with remarkable avian life.

BEHIND THE LENS: AN EPIC JOURNEY WITH A CHINSTRAP PENGUIN

By Matthew Scott

Expedition Filmmaker and member of Silversea’s talented Onboard Photographer team Ross Vernon McDonald chuckles over the peculiar mannerisms of penguins. “They are clumsy and awkward, seemingly unintelligent, but in an endearing kind of way that makes them amazingly photogenic,” he recalls. “Their poised stature gives them a characteristic waddle, while their flailing flippers seem to protrude outwards as their only means of stability.”

A Subject on the Move: Half Moon Island, an idyllic natural setting in Antarctica’s South Shetland Islands, staged a unique moment for McDonald, which he highlights as a defining moment in his career. It involved a Chinstrap Penguin, a hazardous stretch of rocks from the Southern Ocean to a penguin colony atop a hill, and a handheld camera.

REIMAGINING EUROPE’S CLASSIC GRAND TOUR

By Sue Bryant

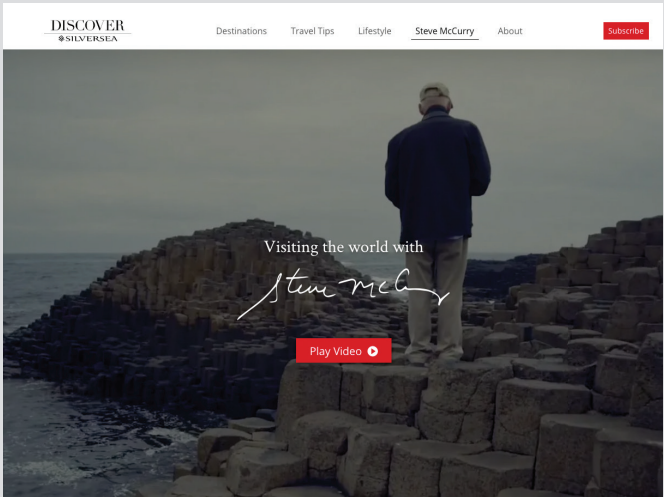

Venice seduces. The crumbling, ochre and russet palazzi, glorious churches and cool, green canals of La Serenissima have been on many a traveller’s wishlist for centuries. I’ve always been enchanted by the fact that Lord Byron, the great 19th century romantic poet, enjoyed swimming in the canals when he lived here in 1816. Byron had long dreamed of visiting Venice and adored what he found.

The idea of travellers even having a wishlist this long ago is intriguing, but true. The flamboyant Byron was typical of wealthy young men of the 18th and 19th centuries, travelling with an entourage through Europe, ostensibly to study classical art and expand the mind but in many cases, more inclined to run wild and embark on love affairs.

This fashion for extended wanderings through Europe had a name: The Grand Tour. The title was coined by early travel writer Richard Lassels, who used it in his guidebook The Voyage of Italy, published in 1670, describing young aristocrats, mainly, but not exclusively British, travelling abroad for two or three years after graduating from university.

The only thing that makes conquering this traveller's paradise more epic is sailing there while relishing the onboard indulgences, gourmet cuisine and personalised service offered by Silversea Expeditions.

Silversea's standard air package includes roundtrip Economy Class airfare and transfers between airport and pier on embarkation and disembarkation days. In conjunction with select flights, an overnight stay at a Silver Shore Hotel property will be added to the air package at the time of booking as an optional component and for an additional charge.

You will be able to pre-book speciality restaurant dinner reservations in advance (from 120 to 7 days prior to sailing), along with optional shore excursions, beauty, spa and fitness services.
